Ward was devastated by her father's death, and she struggled to cope with her grief. She eventually found solace in writing, and she began to share her story with others. Ward's writing is raw and honest, and it provides a unique glimpse into the grieving process.

In addition to her grief, Ward also writes about her experiences with love and loss. She describes her first love, a man named Ryan. Ryan was a kind and compassionate man, and Ward fell deeply in love with him. However, their relationship was not meant to be, and they eventually broke up.

Ward was heartbroken after her breakup with Ryan, but she eventually found love again. She met her husband, Scott, and they quickly fell in love. Scott was a loving and supportive partner, and he helped Ward to heal from her past.

Ward and Scott had two children together, and they lived a happy life in the blue house on Peach Street. However, their happiness was short-lived. Scott was diagnosed with cancer, and he died a few years later.

Ward was once again devastated by the loss of a loved one, but she was determined to find a way to move on. She continued to write, and she also found solace in her children. Ward's story is a testament to the power of love and the human spirit. It is a story of hope and healing, and it is sure to inspire readers who have ever experienced loss.
