In the middle of the 19th century, the Victorian era began. Victorian literature was characterized by its realism and social commentary. Some of the most famous Victorian novelists include Charles Dickens, William Makepeace Thackeray, and George Eliot.

The Twentieth Century

The 20th century was a time of even greater change for English literature. The modernist era, which began in the early 20th century, rejected the traditional forms and values of Victorian literature. Modernist writers such as James Joyce, Virginia Woolf, and T.S. Eliot experimented with new forms of expression and explored the complexities of the human psyche.

In the middle of the 20th century, the postmodern era began. Postmodern writers such as Salman Rushdie, Toni Morrison, and Margaret Atwood have challenged the traditional notions of truth, beauty, and identity. They have also explored the experiences of marginalized groups, such as women, minorities, and the LGBTQ community.

The Present Day

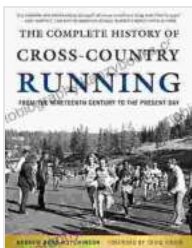

English literature continues to thrive in the 21st century. Contemporary writers such as Zadie Smith, Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie, and Colson Whitehead are exploring new ways to tell stories and to engage with the world around them.
