The victims were all prostitutes, and their murders were particularly brutal. Each woman was stabbed multiple times, and their bodies were mutilated. The killer also removed organs from some of the victims.

The Suspects

Over the years, many suspects have been proposed in the Jack the Ripper case. Some of the most popular suspects include:

- Aaron Kosminski: A Polish immigrant who was living in Whitechapel at the time of the murders. Kosminski was a suspect in the case for many years, but he was never charged with any crime.
- Montague John Drutt: A barrister who was living in Whitechapel at the time of the murders. Drutt was a suspect in the case for a short time, but he was later ruled out by the police.
- Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence: The eldest son of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert. Clarence was a suspect in the case for many years, but he was never charged with any crime.
- James Maybrick: A cotton merchant who was living in Liverpool at the time of the murders. Maybrick was a suspect in the case for a short time, but he was later ruled out by the police.

The Evidence

The evidence in the Jack the Ripper case is limited. There is no physical evidence linking any of the suspects to the murders. The only evidence that exists is the testimony of witnesses, and this testimony is often unreliable.

One of the most important pieces of evidence in the case is a letter that was sent to the Central News Agency on September 27, 1888. The letter, which was signed "Jack the Ripper," claimed responsibility for the murders of Annie Chapman, Elizabeth Stride, and Catherine Eddowes. The letter also contained a number of graphic details about the murders, which suggests that the writer had some knowledge of the crimes.

The Theories

There are many different theories about who Jack the Ripper was and why he committed the murders. Some of the most popular theories include:

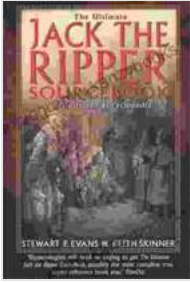

- The Ripper was a madman: This theory suggests that the Ripper was a mentally ill individual who killed the women in a fit of rage or madness.
- The Ripper was a serial killer: This theory suggests that the Ripper was a serial killer who killed the women for sexual gratification.
- The Ripper was a ritual killer: This theory suggests that the Ripper was a member of a cult or secret society that killed the women as part of a ritual.
- The Ripper was a political assassin: This theory suggests that the Ripper was a political assassin who killed the women to destabilize the government or to promote a particular cause.

The Legacy

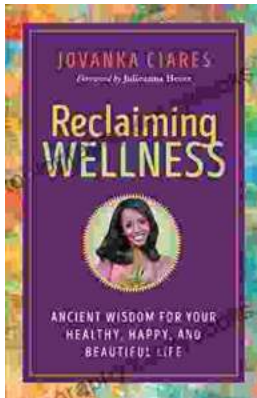

The Jack the Ripper case remains one of the most famous unsolved crimes in history. The case has been the subject of numerous books, articles, and films. The Ripper has also been portrayed in popular culture as a symbol of terror and violence.
